How to Celebrate Valentine's Day on Ash Wednesday

This year Ash Wednesday and Valentine's Day fall on the same day. An unfortunate coincidence – maybe! Perhaps if we think about it, we may discover a hidden connection between the two.

Valentine's Day, which has a tenuous connection to a St. Valentine who may or may not have existed, began to evolve in the 14th century into the holiday so familiar to us today. The love originally celebrated on that day was courtly love, in which desire was expressed through chivalry and nobility of purpose and ritually enacted. The ardent young suitor would strive to win the favor of a virtuous young lady through acts of service and she would either accept or rebuff his efforts. A genre of romance literature, poetry and song fueled this development. St. Ignatius, who before his conversion was a courtier and soldier, was much taken with this notion and had his sights on a lady to whom he wished to give his fealty. Vestiges of his model of devotion can be seen in some of his references to Our Lady, the Blessed Mother.

Ash Wednesday, on the other hand, arises from a Jewish tradition, mentioned throughout the Old Testament, of covering oneself in sackcloth and ashes—and often fasting—as an expression of grief and/or repentance. As one example, God sent the prophet Jonah to Nineveh with a message threatening the city with total destruction because the people there were so sinful. To Jonah's disappointment, the people surprisingly responded by donning sackcloth and covering themselves with ashes. Even the king called a fast and "sat in ashes". And so the city was spared.

The early Church adopted this Old Testament tradition. For hundreds of years grave sinners who had been excluded from the Church did public penance by dressing in sackcloth and ashes, especially during Lent. Eventually, as public penance was discontinued, Lent evolved into a more widely practiced but less rigorous penitential season. But still, harking back to ancient tradition, ashes were placed on people's heads at its start. By about 1100 the first day of Lent became known as Ash Wednesday. In Christian tradition, the ashes were made by burning the previous year's palms, symbolically connecting the celebration of Jesus's entry into Jerusalem as messiah with the sacrifice and suffering he endured to fulfill his messianic call.

So what connects these two observances, one so ebullient and the other so somber? In a word, love — its presence and its absence.

We experience love in many ways. Romantic love with its intense emotions is one form of love, which is what we associate with Valentine's Day. Another form is the love within families or between friends, the people we call are "loved ones." This is different from love as compassion which may be felt toward unknown individuals or groups of people and ultimately all people, even those we don't like.

Booklets with the Sunday readings are in the rear of the church.

There are other forms of love, of course, but the deepest insight into love comes from our Christian faith when we are told that “God is love.” For if love and God are one, then not to love is to turn away from God. And conversely, turning back to God is to embrace the love that we have tragically lost. This is a common occurrence in human experience; our love is veined with imperfections. Love can be even displaced by other feelings—hate, anger, fear, resentment, pride—or it can be nipped in the bud by neglect or inattention. Jesus became human to free us from the stranglehold of these unloving inclinations, which become patterns of behavior in us. He taught us instead how we can love as God loves. “Be perfect,” Jesus tells us, “as your heavenly father is perfect.” If Valentine’s Day reminds of the ecstatic kind of love that romantic poetry so joyfully celebrates, Ash Wednesday reminds us that love can be recovered when it has been lost by returning to our God who is the source of all love.

Easier said than done, of course! We become crippled with our bad habits and even come up with “righteous” reasons for our unloving choices. This is what happened to Jonah. He didn’t think the Ninevites deserved to be forgiven and was angry at God for being merciful toward them. But God’s perfect love is always merciful—and just. Ironically, Jonah had to learn that he, too, perhaps even more than the Ninevites, needed to repent if he was really to embrace the love of his life.

The psalm for Ash Wednesday (the 51st, called the miserere, or psalm of repentance) captures that moment when we are caught out of love and desperately need to fall back in love:

*Create in me a clean heart, O God, and put a new and steadfast spirit within me.
My sacrifice, O God, is a broken spirit;
a broken and contrite heart, O God, you will not despise.*

The ashes are an outward sign of our contrition, our recognition that we have failed to love always as God desires and a commitment to focus during Lent on the ways we have loved imperfectly and the inclinations and patterns that have hampered us.

So on Wednesday I invite you to see in your valentine the gift of God’s infinite love and to see in the ashes regret for falling short in responding to that love and a sincere desire to do better, to “repent and believe in the Gospel”—the good news that God wants us to be eternally in his loving presence – the greatest romance of all!

NOTE FROM THE PASTOR

Bringing Communion to the Homebound

When people are ill or indisposed and so confined to home, one of the things they most miss is attending mass and receiving communion. Parish volunteers serve as Eucharistic Ministers to bring Communion to the homebound. If you – or someone you know as a family member, friend or neighbor – have such a need and would like to receive Communion, contact the Parish Rectory so that we can arrange a visit. It's easy. Just call the Rectory, even on behalf of someone else (with their approval, of course).
