Sharing our Faith

Old St. Joseph's Parish Religious Education Program (PREP) for children has resumed after the summer break. Religious education, however, takes no vacation. And while our first through six graders have received the textbooks that are the basis of the PREP curriculum, if all they learn is the contents of the books, then PREP will not truly be religious education.

It's true there is much to learn: the Word of God revealed in Scripture, our sacramental celebrations and prayer traditions, and the ways in which our Church is both a local and a global community. But book learning is not enough. Christian faith is all about relationship and in order for it to remain vibrant and relevant for both individuals and the Church—that is, for the whole people of God—it must be experienced in the context of relationships. That is how we share our faith—from one generation to the next, from those already in the Church to those entering it, from those who see their way clearly to those who are struggling—through the example of our lives and through our interactions with others.

Our PREP teachers nurture the experience of faith for our children, but the role is not exclusively theirs. This responsibility belongs first and foremost to parents. That is why the rite of infant baptism includes a reminder to parents that they are their child's first teachers in faith. Godparents support them in this work, as do grandparents, other family members and friends and, eventually, members of the wider community. All members of the Catholic faith community are responsible for sharing our faith through the relationships we cultivate in word and deed.

The quality of the relationships our children experience with us is the foundation of their capacity to love God. The words and example of significant people in children's lives introduce them to the experience of love, of wonder, of the goodness of creation and their place in it, and of the awesome yet intimate presence of God. When a mother shares her son's delight in the discoveries of, for example, the properties of mud (but maybe not in the house), or a father helps his daughter overcome shyness and learn to make friends outside the family circle, these parents lay a foundation for their child's relationship with a Creator who is deeply in love with them. Supporting children as they engage in the world around them also encourages the sense of agency that is the basis of their discipleship.

It sometimes surprises children that to love God is inseparable from loving your neighbor—especially when it's pointed out that one's neighbor includes one's siblings! In the eyes of God, we have all been created equally and belong to one human community. We are called to treat one another with the dignity with which God's loving creation imbues us. The way we live out this call by making kindness and generosity the expected behavior at home shapes our children's capacity to experience God's love and their own goodness. The loving relationships our children experience within our families spills over into their relationship with God and their desire to be loving toward others.

The goodness of creation is a central aspect of our faith. Our scripture begins with it; our creed professes a savior both fully human and fully divine; our Eucharist is celebrated with the bread and wine that "earth has given and human hands have made" and the gestures of our bodies: standing, kneeling, the sign of the cross. Bringing children to Mass and praying together by saying grace at meals at home helps children experience the creation and the goodness of God.

But these are challenging times to share our faith. Perhaps some of us who have been looking to others to do just that are reminded again that it is our responsibility. A fifth-century Syriac wrote, "Be a proclaimer of the Gospel at all times. You will become a proclaimer of the Gospel when you lay upon yourself the Gospel's way of life. Show to the world that the other world exists." This other world acknowledges a greater, wiser, more compassionate power than that of flawed and limited human beings. This other world values each human life, whatever it looks like, in whatever circumstances it finds itself. This other world believes in the possibility of harmony among all people, of peace among all nations. The oft-heard attitude "that's just the way the world is", challenges us, as people of faith, to offer an experience of this other world.

Perhaps today we can take on an additional responsibility: to show to the world that another Church exists. Our lives can show what our Church can be, renewed and sharing a living faith with our children and a world that sorely needs it.

Bringing Communion to the Homebound

When people are confined to home, they can remain connected to our shared worship by receiving Communion at home. If you, a family member, friend or neighbor (with their approval of course), would like to receive Communion at home, contact the Parish Rectory to arrange for a parish Eucharistic Minister to visit.

SNAP Makes a Difference & So Can You!

Over the last few weeks, Old St. Joseph's Sunday bulletins have sketched out the benefits of SNAP—the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program—to members of our Philadelphia community, particularly families and older adults. Many people who are disabled and the families that care for them also rely on SNAP.

According to 2015 Census data, nearly 1.7 million people in Pennsylvania are disabled, many with multiple disabilities limiting their mobility, cognition, sight or hearing. That same year, 337,000 low-income, non-elderly people with disabilities participated in SNAP. Although about 21% of disabled SNAP participants are able to work part-time, their average monthly household income is $1000, and their average monthly medical expenses are $155. SNAP's benefit calculation can add $138 to $363 to their monthly income, depending on the household composition, a small but significant contribution to households that must sometimes choose among 'eat, heat or treat'.

The U.S. House of Representatives and the Senate are at work reconciling the farm bill, including the scaled back House version of SNAP and the Senate's proposal to maintain the SNAP as it is. It is critical that people of faith speak up for the men, women and children, young and old, who depend on the Supplemental Nutritional Assistance Program to put food on their table. Eating is not a luxury, but a basic human right. Jesus invites us at every liturgy to share a meal. It is a meal that nourishes us spiritually. With faith in His promise to sustain us, let us join in an effort to provide physical nourishment to our brothers and sisters in the Lord.

Visit Bread for the World ("a collective Christian voice urging our nation's decision makers to end hunger at home and abroad") at bread.org/information-for-activists for the latest updates on the status of SNAP and the phone numbers and emails of your Congressional representatives.

Many thanks to Lorraine McDermott Knight for providing the background on the difference SNAP can make for hungry people in Philadelphia. Past weeks' bulletins can be found at oldstjoseph.org/about-osj/bulletin/.

Women Faith and Friends

Women, Faith and Friends welcomes new members to join them at their next meeting, September 25 6:30-7:30 PM The meeting follows the Lectio Divina style of faith sharing, reading and discussing the daily Gospels, as well as drawing from the Ignatian tradition of seeing imagining ourselves there with Jesus.
